INTRODUCTION

The Fleurieu Coast is on the western side of the Fleurieu Peninsula. It is one of the most beautiful and diverse regions in South Australia.

It is a leisurely drive just south of Adelaide on the main route to Kangaroo Island. It has a temperate climate, amazing and varied scenery, welcoming locals, fine foods, beer, wines and spirits and culture, excellent accommodation options and a wide range of historical, aquatic, arts and other recreational attractions.

Travel the Southern Ocean Drive and take in the lush farming land, rolling hills, pristine valleys, stringybark and pine forests, and unforgettable seascapes, this scenic route is 85km in length, and allows you to discover some of the Fleurieu Coast's natural wonders. Highlights of the drive include Mary McKillop's cottage, Torrens Vale Lookout, Parawa, Ingalalla Waterfalls, Deep Creek National Park, Tapanappa Lookout, Raywood Nursery, Talisker Mine ruins, Sappers Road Lookout (views of Kangaroo Island and Starfish Hill Wind Farm), Morgans Beach (Cape Jervis), Delamere, Rapid Bay, Second Valley, Lady Bay, Normanville, Yankalilla Historic Museum and Shrine of Our Lady of Yankalilla Christ Church Yankalilla. Collect a detailed map from the Visitor Centre.

KAURNA NATION

The area encompassing Crystal Brook to Cape Jervis (Parewarengk), and from the coast to the Mount Lofty Ranges, is the traditional land of the Kaurna people, who have lived here for thousands of years. Traditionally, they lived in independent groups within their own lands, coming together for trade, social, ceremonial and religious reasons. The Kaurna people lived by the coast in summer months and moved to the foothills in the colder weather for better shelter and firewood. The inland areas also contained more mammals to hunt, and creeks and swamps contained fish and other water life. Their well-established travelling tracks are reflected in some of the region's road routes today.

TJIRBRUKI DREAMING

The Tjirbruki Dreaming has great significance for the Kaurna people and the Yankalilla area. Tjirbruki was an ancestral being of the Kaurna people of the Adelaide plains. Tjirbruki's nangari (nephew) Kulultuwi, his sister's son, killed a kari (emu) belonging to Tjirbruki, who forgave him. However, Kulultuwi was subsequently killed by his part brothers, Jurawi and Tetjawi. Tjirbruki had to decide if Kulultuwi had been lawfully killed, and determined he was murdered and avenged the crime by spearing and burning the nephews, killing them in the vicinity of Warriparinga (Bedford Park). Tjirbruki then carried Kulultuwi's body to Tulukudank (a fresh water spring at Kingston Park) and then to Patparno (Rapid Bay) for burial in a perki (cave). Along his journey he stopped and wept and his luki (tears) formed the freshwater springs along the coast at Ka'reildun (Hallett Cove), Tainba'rang (Port Noarlunga), Potartang (Red Ochre Cove), Ruwarung (Port Willunga), Witawali (Sellicks Beach), and Kongaratinga (near Wirrina Cove). So sad was Tjirbruki he decided he no longer wished to live as a man and his spirit became the Tjirbruki (glossy Ibis), and his body became the baruke (iron pyrites) outcrop at Barrukungga, the place of hidden fire (Brukunga – north of Nairne in the Adelaide Hills).

EUROPEAN HISTORY

Colonel William Light arrived at Yattagolinga (now known as Rapid Bay) on 8 September 1836 aboard The Rapid, accompanied by The Cygnet. Light had been sent by the South Australia Company to search for a harbour and find a site for the capital of the colony. Light was enthralled with Rapid Bay, describing the area as 'a delightful place, covered with fine grass, a variety of shrubs, flowers and trees. In the 1920s a large rock was found at Rapid Bay inscribed with 'W L 1836'. The original stone is now in the Mortlock Library with a replica located on the Rapid Bay foreshore, along with a replica of an anchor from the Rapid. Robert Norman came to South Australia on the Taglioni in 1844 and in 1849 was the first grantee of land at the Bungala Flats where he planned to build a community that would become a fashionable seaside resort. By 1855 he had laid out the plans for the town that bears his name and remains true to his vision, Normanville.

Normanville Foreshore.

Normanville G3

Normanville was once the area's main port, however most of the original jetty has been washed away. Today the pristine beach, with its heritage-listed foreshore, is the main attraction. The dunes stretch all the way from Lady Bay (F4) to Carrickalinga (G3), and, accompanied by the Fleurieu Coastal Walk, make the perfect backdrop for a leisurely stroll or swim. The township has a large range of shopping, bed and breakfast accommodation (including caravan parks) and eateries. Visitors can also enjoy golf, horse riding, cycling, fishing and other recreational activities.
